

Colorado auto dealer Todd Maul named chairman of Clear the Air Foundation

DENVER – Todd Maul, managing partner of John Elway Dealerships, is the new chairman of the Clear the Air Foundation, a nonprofit organization created by the Colorado Automobile Dealers Association to recycle old or poorly maintained vehicles, which disproportionately contribute to local air quality problems.

This is the next step in Maul's commitment to this cause. The John Elway Dealerships have so far donated 38 old vehicles to the Clear the Air Foundation, including the vehicle that put the nonprofit over the 1,000th donation mark.

Maul also chaired the 2014 Denver Auto Show in April and its Charity Preview Party, which raised $83,000 for three nonprofits, including the Clear the Air Foundation.

The Clear the Air Foundation has received 1,072 vehicles so far, the vast majority from Colorado's new car dealers who received them as trade-ins.

"The Clear the Air Foundation is one of many ways Colorado's auto dealers demonstrate their commitment to the state," Maul said. "We know that today's new vehicles produce very low emissions but that only benefits Colorado's air if we can get the old, high-polluting vehicles off the roads. I'm honored to take the reins of the nonprofit from Lee Payne, who helped make it so impactful with his leadership and vehicle donations from Planet Honda and Planet Hyundai."

The Regional Air Quality Council partnered with the Colorado Automobile Dealers Association in 2012 to support the Clear the Air Foundation.

Through an agreement with the Colorado Auto Recyclers, the foundation crushes and shreds the donated vehicles, which may pollute vastly more than new vehicles. The proceeds from selling the cars to local auto recyclers help underwrite scholarships for aspiring auto technicians.

Members of the public can help take these cars off the road by donating their aging vehicles. They can learn more by visiting ClearTheAirFoundation.org or calling 303.775.8896.

The Colorado Broadcasters Association and its member stations have supported the Clear the Air Foundation by airing radio and TV ads promoting the public donation option.

Taxpayers who donate vehicles to the Clear the Air Foundation may qualify the same tax benefits they would receive from any other car donation program.
